Hi Brittany,

Please add my comments below regardin the events of 6/15/2022 (or actually the late night of 6/14 and early morning 6/15).

And I noticed I've misspelled bass as base in darn near all of my emails. ...

Thx,
-Doug

Hi Drew,

Thanks for your voicemail earlier today June 15th, and thanks for calling and speaking with me this afternoon.

I will do whatever is needed to support enforcement here. I did take a couple pictures last night. I also recorded about 90 seconds using my iphone audio recorder application. Playback on the iphone only reveals the clicking of the clock in our upstairs room here. But after you and I spoke today, I did play the audio through a system that has a base speaker – and low and behold, you can definitely here the base beating, even thought the clock clicking is far more pronounced – but the base beat is there. And I didn't call the non-emergency number last night thinking for too long that since it was a Tuesday night the music would soon stop. It didn't, so I walked over and spoke to them. The folks there initially said they're renting and didn't know anything. Then the guy (photographer?) I spoke with longest said he/they were family members of the owners, were told the music needed to be turned off at 10pm, and that they'd get everything turned off. But it was 1:30 am 6/15 when (while I was still there) they finally did get the sound system powered off. Neither of us quite understood why it took so long to turn off. He (and all of them) seemed nice enough. But it's clear there's little if any urgency or importance in actually having the sound turned off by 10 pm. The speakers still looked like they were sitting directly on the floor (i.e., no foam or spacer or anything between speaker structure and floor structure), and the stage is still at the SW corner inside the space (so speakers and stage face our home on the NE corner of the Laurelwood – BVH intersection). I saw no evidence of anything changed to try to mitigate the sound. And I witnessed nothing last night / early this morning that would give me any confidence that Queez Asian Cuisine here at 8225 SW Apple Way will be more seriously attempting to adhere to the 10pm to 7am quiet hours any day soon, sadly. The people all seemed nice enough, but none of them even tried to turn off the sound system until I had already been inside their space there speaking with them for at least 30 minutes.

I'll make it a point to call the non-dispatch police number in the future. I talked myself out of doing that last night around 11:00 ish thinking that the sound would likely stop soon, being a Tuesday night and all, and not wanting to protract staying up. But as it turned out I ended up staying up anyway trying to do some work rather than try to sleep with the constant base.. And I should have called because it ended up that I wasn't really able to go to bed anyway until about 2am ish, after having walked over there to Queenz to speak with them...

I'll also try to find an app or something that might allow for better video and audio recording of the noise.

Sadly, I do very much support denial of any use permit for this establishment because they've demonstrated that they will thumb their nose at whatever quiet hours there may be. My vote is that the zoning and use of the property revert back to what it was before Queenz occupied the premises. Traffic isn't getting any quieter, and the last thing we need is more unchecked or uncheckable or unmitigated sound pollution. Our residential area here has to be one of the last row of homes backing up to BVH, and a sound wall would be nice (but is understandably perhaps too expensive). When the US Bank went in, there was a promise not to use high mounted general 24-7 lighting or lower mounted up lighting, to avoid light pollution. That didn't happen, so we're skittish about further development and changes that might further erode the living conditions at our properties.

Best regards,
-Doug

Hi Doug,

Let's chat this morning. I'm going to start building a court case but I'll need some help from you. When we visited at your house a few weeks back, I suggested you take video's from your upstairs window when the noise is going. Did you take any videos? If so, they'll have to contain some verbage and I can go over all that when we talk for any future video evidence.

I'm going to get a statement from the planning person working their conditional use permit so I will have expert testimony on planning/zoning regulations if this goes to trial.

I will be out there today taking measurements of the distance between your prop. and the restaurant, might need your assistance with that.

Thanks,

Hi Drew,

This is getting absolutely ridiculous! It's 12:45am 6/15/2022, and the base boom has been continuing since at least 11pm or so (6/14/2022). It's a Tuesday night / Wednesday morning, so this is not what my wife and I expected. We expected problems on weekends mainly. We have zero confidence Queenz will shut down activities at 10pm. Tracy has called to ask to come over to listen to sounds levels and such. But my wife and I are pretty much done with this.

I'm going to walk over there right now, if my wife Lora let's me do that. I'll have to call the police dispatch number again I guess. That's so time consuming and disruptive.

Please let me know what my next steps are. The Queenz folks are apparently not going to try very hard to comply with quiet hours...

-Doug

Alright, just let me know if it continues and we'll deal with it if happens further.

Thanks,

Drew

Hi Drew,

Lora and I haven't been home the last two weekends, so we really can't provide feedback.

Thanks for continuing to help with this!!

Best regards,

-Doug

Good morning Doug,

I'm following up on our conversations about the late music coming from the restaurant across the road. Has this issue been under control for the last 2 weekends?

Thank you,
